EXPRESS AGENT IS MISSING; $13,000 HAS ALSO VANISHEDPolice Seek Ralph Want After Discovery That Money Is Gone.*CONSIGNED TO A LOCAL BANK*Valuable Package Shipped Here on Monday but Not Delivered Because Bank was Closed, Missing After Night Agent of Company Disappears*Simultaneous with the disappearance of Ralph Want, night agent for the United States Express Company here, $13,000 consigned to a local bank has been found missing. Want left some time during Monday night and the package containing the money was not accounted for by the day office yesterday morning.*On Tuesday morning Mrs. Want, who lives on Fayette Street, with her family, awaited with her husband's return from work. Instead, the first mail delivery brought her a letter from him imparting the information that he had committed a crime for which he must leave the town and telling her not to worry—that he would communicate with her later.*Half-hourly, the woman hurried down to police court where she met a reporter with Mayor, Marshal, Chief of Police, and City Clerk today. She was at a loss to know what trouble her husband was in and she did not suspect that he had robbed the express company until officials of the company informed her later in the day.*The express company refused to discuss the matter with the newspaper men this morning, one of the local employees absolutely denied that there had been any robbery. "We have absolutely no information to give out," he said.*It was learned, however, that the package of money arrived late Monday afternoon and was taken by a driver to the bank to which it was consigned. Finding the bank closed for the day, the driver returned it to the office, where Want stood for it and took charge of it for the night. Want is said to have taken the packet and departed on one of the night trains. Nothing has been heard from him since.*Officials of the United States Express Company came to town yesterday in consequence of the call of Agent G. B. Zimmerman and spent the entire day over the matter and putting the whole in motion for the capture of the fugitive. They departed last night.*Various rumors spread to the effect that the sum missing was from $1,000 to $10,000, but local bankers scoff at the idea that such a large sum as the latter would have been sent here. They say there has been an inactivity in the shipment of money into town recently though the banks have sent large sums out. It is said that Want handled about $100 a day for the express company a short time ago, hence it is believed that the theft was conceived and executed within a short time. Had he planned a robbery, he would have had plenty of opportunities to get away with larger sums.*Want is about 35 years old and has been employed by the express company for a number of years, the majority of which were spent as a messenger. He was under the usual bond of $1,000. He is a member of the Connellsville Military Band and will be about home. The loss, it is said, Want is not captured, will be met by the express company and not the bank.*At the office of the United States Express Company in Pittsburgh it was stated that the report of the robbery had reached there but there was no statement to be given out.*TEACHER IS CHOSEN.*Superintendent Ashe Recommends a Jersey Man to School Board.*Superintendent of Schools S. F. Ashe will recommend to the School Board at its meeting on Monday the selection of instructor of chemistry in the high school succeeding H. W. Webster, who has been a teacher at the school for about two years. The loss, it is said, will be met by the express company and the board of transportation department are working on a schedule today.*Millionaire Holder of the Martha Washington Will; Place From Which Document Was Stolen

They told them they knew nothing of Steele's property and were released.*Williams confessed yesterday and also named Martin Gallo, Silky Liefer, Samuel Trump and Joseph Gallo. STORK BEATS THE GRIM REAPER IN THREE DISTRICTS

As Shown by Figures for Everson, Upper Tyrone and Bullskin

AS COMPILED BY THE REGISTRAR

Birthday Anniversary of Mrs. Mary Ann Porter Observed at Her Home Near Town, Farmers' Institute Opens. Other Notes of News.

Special to The Courier
SCOTTSDALE, Jan. 14.—Robert Goss of Everson, registrar of vital statistics for Evanson, Upper Tyrone and Bullskin township, has made up an interesting table of the births and deaths during the past year in the three districts, which shows that the work has been more than twice as active as the Grim Reaper. Of births there were 190 in the year in Evanson borough, 108 in Upper Tyrone township and 104 in Bullskin township, a total of 333 births. In the way of deaths there were 37 in Evanson borough, 12 in Upper Tyrone township and 14 in Bullskin township, a total of 63 deaths.

The score of births by months is interesting in the following table. No 1 representing the births in Evanson No. 2 those in Upper Tyrone and No. 3 those in Bullskin township by months as follows:

No. 1 No. 2 No. 3

JANUARY 8 12 1

February 5 10 2

March 9 9 2

April 10 12 1

May 12 10 1

June 6 11 1

July 3 7 1

August 7 13 1

September 1 9 1

October 1 9 1

November 1 9 1

December 13 1 1

Total 199 198 30

From the figures it would appear that in the entitled Evanson is most popular to be born in April, May or December while in the less urban Tyrone the popular months are more in number and include January, February, April, May, June or September; while the best figures shown by Bullskin township are those for January and December, with May, July, September and October following closely.

The figures also show that in the different towns the scores Nos. 1, 2 and 3 representing Evanson, Upper Tyrone and Bullskin townships are:

No. 1 No. 2 No. 3

JANUARY 3 5 1

February 2 4 1

March 7 2 1

April 5 2 1

MAY 9 1 1

JUNE 4 2 1

AUGUST 1 1 1

SEPTEMBER 1 1 1

OCTOBER 1 1 1

NOVEMBER 1 1 1

DECEMBER 1 1 1

Total 44 44 11

The figures indicate that one more is born in any one month and not shown in great particular.

New Not A Pimple To Be Seen.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 27, 1912. "I had been troubled for the past three years with pimples which completely covered my face feast upon me, cause me to pick at them, feeling very uncomfortable. I tried most all kinds of acids, creams, but with no effect. I had a sample of Resinol Soap and

I bought Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment,

ACID STOMACHS
ARE DANGEROUS

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the stomach, and leading to probably one-half of cases of stomach trouble known as acidosis.

Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatments are useless in such cases for they leave the source of the trouble untouched. Acidosis is dangerous as well. The acid must be neutralized. And its formation prevented, and the best thing for this purpose is a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of magnesia, a simple antacid taken in a glass of warm water, and after which the acid is neutralized, the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acid is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause greatest distress may be eaten with impunity if they are first thoroughly washed in a diluted magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and should always be kept handy.—Adv.

OHIO COAL OUTPUT

In spite of Adverse Conditions a Gain is shown.

Although Ohio suffered from a number of untoward influences during 1913, the production cost in that state was slightly in excess of the cost per ton in the preceding year, but it amounted to a little over $1,500,000 short tons. In the late spring the mining operations were adversely affected by the unprecedented flood which tied up transportation and put the coal miners out of business for about one month.

Later in the year, as if to make up for the excess of water during the spring, the Ohio Valley region was seriously crippled by drought, and the water supply in Ohio was deficient during September, October and November.

BROADWAY JONES

FROM THE PLAY OF
GEORGE M. COHAN

EDWARD MARSHALL
WITH PHOTOGRAPHS FROM SCENES IN THE PLAY

Copyright 1913 by C. H. & M. Company

CHAPTER I.

Back of the massed red-brick and slate-roofed buildings forming, in Jonesville, Conn., the extensive group devoted to the manufacture of Jones' "Pepin Gum," was the abandoned power house, wherein were housed the water-wheels which once had furnished force to drive the factory's machinery. The stream's diminishing flow, the increased needs of the business, and the economy of steam all had militated toward industrial abandonment of the old building.

Small boys never fished there, for the sluice-waters were too swift, loafers never idled there, for the watchmen of the mills were too strict in their guardianship; but lovers sometimes wandered there, of moonlight nights, and in the afternoons, when the academy sessions had ended, Broadway, really named Jackson Jones, but nicknamed "Broadway" because of his continual glorification of New York's great thoroughfare, which he had seen upon occasion, sometimes went there "to get away from Jonesville." This afternoon he was to teach two Jonesville girl friends new dance steps which he had learned in New York city. Later, dancing there with him at the Odd Fellows hall, they would confront all other girls in Jonesville.

The girls came promptly. Clara Spotswood was the daughter of the local judge, Josie Richards the daughter of a recent manager of the gum factory. Her father was now laid up with rheumatism, and Josie was in training for a bookkeeper's post in the great enterprise which swallowed most of Jonesville's youth of either sex, as soon as they left school.

"Now this step, girls," Broadway said in preface, "as invented or Broadway for use upon Broadway by Broadway people. Don't mistake it for a quiet nap. It's not a sleep-dance. It was not dreamt up in Jonesville."

"And was everybody dancing it?" asked Josie.

"Every girl I saw," he answered. He had been telling of a ball he had attended in New York, but not quite all he might have told about it. "Everyone I saw, but one."

"And was the dancing old style?"

"No; she was being carried to an ambulance. She had just sprained an ankle."

"Oh, Jackson, you're too funny!"

"Thanks for those kind words," he watched them whirl together for a moment. "No, not quite that way, Clara. Don't give a Broadway step a Jonesville twist, you want to give Jonesville step a Broadway polish."

Breathless they stopped their efforts. "Oh, you and your Broadway! You're always talking about Broadway!"

"Clara," said Jackson very seriously, "have you ever seen Broadway?"

"You know I haven't."

"Well, if you had, you'd never see another place you thought worth seeing."

"Oh, you and your Broadway!" Josie Richards was an extremely pretty girl, more serious than Clara, who was flirty. "No wonder the boys all call you Broadway."

I suppose a minister is proud when people call him 'doctor,'" was the answer. "When people call me 'Broadway,' I feel about like that."

"I'd rather folks would call me Andrew—Jackson," remarked Sammy. "Andrew—Jackson—was a—statesman—not—a—street."

"Your—er—little brother," began Broadway, but not being eloquent by nature, he left the sentence incomplete.

"He thinks he'll be a Caesar. He wants to kill some boys by strategy, for he's too fat to fight."

The girls laughed again. Now they had begun the pleasant homeward walk along the high road to the border of the village.

"Can you come to supper?" Clara asked.

"As long as I can't eat on Broadway I'd rather go to your house than to any other place I know," said Jackson. "But I've got to go home first. This collar's wisted."

He was the only boy in Jonesville who would have thought of that; he was the only boy in Jonesville who owned a pair of patent-leather shoes. As they passed his uncle's residence the old man, who was his guardian, caught a glimpse of him through an opening in the neglected shrubbery on the great lawn and sent a serving maid to bid him enter.

Jackson made a wry face for the benefit of the girls, as he said good-by to them, promising to appear for supper at the Spotswoods. He carefully obeyed the summons, but it tickled him. His uncle always tickled him. He believed, and there were others who believed, that his uncle tried to tickle him. They never had got on very well together, the old man was hard, constrictive to the body, stubborn and opposed every young idea, particularly to every young idea which chanced to have originated in his nephew's brain.

"Well, Jackson," said his uncle sourly,

business—

"Yes, sir, I've heard of it." It would have been remarkable if he had not. For two years the air of Jonesville had been full of timid rumors of the gum trust. The whole town was fearful that the great Jones factory might be sold to it and closed.

"After I am gone they will endeavor to secure our factory and business."

Abner Jones went on. "I shall never let them have it. You must never let them have it. Of your pride in the Jones gum."

"It's surely been a handsome little money maker," Broadway granted.

"I do not like your language," said his uncle, "but the meaning of your words is accurate enough. It has made money. It still continues to make money—as an independent gum. It—" Broadway was getting fidgety. The Spotswoods were waiting supper for him. Mrs. Spotswood was a plump and cheerful housewife, who doctored on the recipes he brought back from New York upon the rare occasions when his uncle let him go there.

"It would make more, uncle, wouldn't it, if I lost its independence?" he inquired.

"The plan of the trust is to take it from the market. They have not thought of continuing it as an individual product. They merely wish to eliminate it utterly. This would free their other products of its competition."

"When will he make me the offer?"

"Before your birthday, Jackson."

"Is it as close as that? Is liberty as close as that? I hadn't realized!"

"Jackson, you should be ashamed!

They merely wish to take it from the market so that it no longer will affect her."

"Yes, I've heard." He had—a thousand times.

"Did some one of them chew it?" his nephew inquired earnestly.

"Jackson, you should be ashamed!"

They merely wish to take it from the market so that it no longer will affect her."

"Yes, I've heard." He had—a thousand times.

"That is the reason I am anxious that you should begin to show some real interest in our splendid enterprise. It must be protected at all hazards.

It should be the pride, as it has been the fortune, of the Jones family."

"Honest, uncle, I don't believe I know enough to go into the business.

Aren't you afraid that it would spoil the sale of the gum if anybody should find out I helped to make it? That worries me. The gum must be proected. I leave it to you, uncle. I—"

"Jackson, you are frivolous. You are a tremendous disappointment to me. You—"

"I don't want to be a disappointment, but I almost rather be a disappointment than a gum-maker. I'd—"

"Go!" said his uncle angrily. "I—"

But Jackson did not hear the remainder of the sentence. He had reached its first word.

CHAPTER II.

"I should enjoy the supper better," Broadway said later at the Spotswood family table. "If everything I chew, after I've seen uncle, didn't make me think of gum. I wish there was a way of eating without chewing."

They all laughed, but not very heartily. Gum was a sacred word to them also. It was to every one in Jonesville.

"Let's talk things over after supper," said the judge. Then, after they had gone into his stuffy little study: "Broadway, I've been talking with your uncle."

"That's one reason I would never study law. You have to do such di-

"I have had tales brought to me of some things you have said about Jonesville," said the old man bitterly. "You have compared it most unfavorably with that modern Babylon, New York."

"Well—er—uncle, you know New York is—well, more metropolitan."

"Jonesville is metropolitan enough. Jonesville is a pleasant little town, built by the industry and brains of the members of your family, sir—in both of which you seem to be most singularly lacking; and, while it has fewer people than New York, it has more virtue. You will be the only Jones remaining after I have gone. I am far from well—I—"

Instantly the young man was contrite. He had no wish to hurt his uncle's feelings.

"I'm sorry, sir, if you are feeling ill," he said, respectfully, "but, you see,

you've always lived in Jonesville—great drain on a man's vitality. I didn't mean to say a word to bother

you."

But the old man was not to be packed, and his face continued stern. "It is less your words than what seems to be your disposition which annoys me," he burst forth. "Is there nothing serious in you?"

"I guess I'm pretty young to settle down. Perhaps that's what's the matter."

"I had settled down and had complete charge of this great enterprise before I was eighteen. You might begin to take life seriously."

"You can't take it any other way in Jonesville."

"I feel that I should tell you various details of the business, for my days here may be numbered."

The youth looked deprecatingly around the dull old library, feeling, in the earnestness of his revolt, that it was his own days in Jonesville were but numbered; it would give him great relief. Even death, he thought.

"I'm sorry you're not well, sir."

"We're but shadows cast upon the stream of life. Mere shadows. Jackson."

Jackson gazed at him with careful eyes, that his mouth was also careful was entirely proven by the fact that I said nothing. A carefree mouth might have remarked that his old uncle was a pretty solid shadow, for he weighed close upon two hundred pounds.

"Your father," said this very robust

Jackson, "had some tendencies which I now see in you—exaggerated in you, Jackson. He, too, was frivolous; he, too, longed for the flesh-pots of New York."

"I never did, sir," he said, gravely.

"I wish I might feel sure of that," said Abner Jones. "I should feel sure of the safety of the gum."

"I'll never harm the gum, sir."

"You must not only never harm it;

you must help it. Let me tell you,

Jackson—there is a trust in the gum done me an ill turn. Of course your father was my client—"

"And dear uncle put his books into my dad whenever he could get them caught so he could pull, didn't he?"

"He's a shrewd business man. But don't sell, Jackson." The judge was clearly ill at ease.

"If I don't sell, will I have to turn to and make gum?"

"You ought to. A goose that lays a golden egg should be well cared for."

"Let uncle raise the poultry. I'd rather sell the eggs."

"But, Jackson—"

"Judge, will you come to see me in New York?"

The conversation had brought Jackson Jones to sudden realization of the fact that in eleven months or less he would be twenty-two, and that, as soon as he was twenty-two, he would be free, according to the terms of his dead father's will, to spend his own exactly as he pleased.

"I suppose you'll go there just as soon as you are master of your fortune."

The boy leaned forward eagerly:

"When will it happen, Judge? Will it be on the midnight that begins my birthday, or the midnight that it ends with? Quick! I've got to know."

"Better wait till the next day, Jackson. That's the safest. Oh, I know you'll go! But don't sell to your uncle."

"Promise me."

"When will he make me the offer?"

"Before your birthday, Jackson."

"Is it as close as that? Is liberty as close as that? I hadn't realized!"

"Jackson, you should be ashamed!"

They merely wish to take it from the market so that it no longer will affect her."

"Yes, I've heard." He had—a thousand times.

"The boy leaned forward eagerly:

George Sidney as "Busy Izzy."

THE SOISSON.

GEORGE SIDNEY IN BUST IZZY. Musical comedy is perhaps the most popular form of entertainment but unfortunately certain producing managers for tempestuous girls have sent on tour musical productions so suggestive that they were offensive to people of refinement and good breeding. It is a pleasure to chronicle the coming of George Sidney in his first production of "Busy Izzy" at the Soisson Theatre on Saturday matinee and night January 17. For this merry musical farce is expected to be one of the most successful of the many produced in recent years. It is a clean, wholesome and furiously funny entertainment, one that ladies and children may attend and enjoy without fear of seeing or hearing anything to offend the most fastidious. George Sidney is big fun for every boy contains enough entertainment for a dozen musical comedies. It is a corking good farce to boot with simply overabundant with ludicrous situations, bright repartees. The scenery and costumes are all new and there is an unusually large number of song hits sung by principals, and a chorus who can really sing.

COLONIAL THEATRE, JAN. 15The Red Widow

IN "THE RED WIDOW" Cicero Hannibal Butta, a retired millionaire corset manufacturer of Yonkers, N. Y., U. S. A., and is also a Colonel in the National Guard with, to let him tell it, an International reputation as an army tactician. In London, where he has arrived on a tour around the world, he meets Anna Varvara, "The Red Widow." Anna is fascinating and fiery; also she is the star member of a band of bloodthirsty nihilists who are seeking the life of the Czar, a fact that Cicero does not discover until he has had some of the most exciting experiences of his life while endeavoring to escape from the Russian police web in which he becomes entangled through his infatuation for the female nihilist.
